ABSTRACT

Presented in the resource guide for the Wisconsin curriculum for educable mentally retarded students are safety education teaching units. Learning to Live Safely" is the sixth in a series of persisting life situations. The guide lists behavioral objectives, activities, and annotated resource materials (with distributors' addresses) for primary, intermediate, and secondary units on such topics as fire safety, safety habits, playground safety, and proper street behavior. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The following special education students were enrolled in 16-380, Curriculum in Special Education during the 1972 Summer Session at U.W.-O. The material contained in this resource guide was created solely by these students. It is their hope that their efforts can be used to further the education of exceptional children.

1. The student will list the following three ways that fire can be harmful to him: a. burn fingers and other parts of our bodies b. burn clothing and other possessions c. burn down our homes	Teacher assembles, with student help, a bulletin board using the theme "Time to Learn-- Fire Can Burn". Teacher presents film, "I'm No Fool With Fire", stressing the harmful aspect of fire. Teacher leads discussion concerning proper care of burns. If skin is slightly red, run area under cold water; if burn is severe or deep, contact an adult immediately.	"I'm No Fool With Fire" ROAS/$4.00

	Also discuss proper action to take in case clothing catches fire. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. Have victim lie down, immediately b. Do not run; movement causes flame to spread faster. c. Smother flames by rolling on the ground or with handy material such as a rug. Students role play the proper action to take in case clothing catches fire. Teacher plays "The Fireman and His Work" teaching tape contrasting fire as an enemy or a friend. Follow up the tape with the included worksheets. Use commercial or teacher made Smokey the Bear puppet to dramatize how fire destroys homes and possessions.	"The Fireman and His Work" Wollensak Teaching Tape and Worksheets Available at Fox Valley SEMC. Smokey the Bear material may be obtained from the Department of Natural Resources.

2. The student will list three ways that fire may result from carelessness.	Sing "Smokey the Bear" song to reinforce goals. Smokey the Bear, Smokey the Bear Howlin' and growlin' and a sniffen the air He can spot a fire before it starts to flame That's why they call him Smokey and that's how he got his name. Teacher presents filmstrip "Home Safety" emphasizing how firemen help keep people out of trouble. Stress that most fires are caused by man's carelessness. Ask the students what would happen if you held on to a match until the flame reached your fingers. They could burn themselves, drop the match and burn their clothing or their home. Stress the importance of keeping matches out of the reach of all children. Discuss students' actual experiences or others' experiences regarding the careless use of matches.	"Home Safety" Encyclopedia Britannica Educational Corporation $6.00

	Teacher brings in an electric cord and demonstrates how rubbing can fray it and expose the wire inside. Have the children check the home for this danger, and inform parents that carelessness and neglect may result in fire. Teacher points out the dangers of leaving oily rags, paper or rubbish in the basement, garage, attic, or under the stairs. Teacher presents an illustration to show how easily clothing can catch fire. Discuss the dangers of candles, fire places, gas and electric stoves, and careless smoking habits. Review the proper action to take in case clothing catches fire: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. Lie down b. Do not run c. Smother flames. 	Electric cord from old electrical appliance.

4. The student will be able to list three possible sources of help to contact in case of a fire: a. parents b. nearest neighbor c. relative d. adult passer-by e. operator	Using large cut out finger boards teacher and students can role play this situation by dividing the classroom into rooms, as in a house. A paper representation of a fire can be placed in one of the "rooms" and proper procedure can be acted out. With each child, discuss possible neighbors or relatives near-by they could contact in case of a fire in their home. Make a verbal plan with the child to contact his nearest adult neighbor in case of a fire so that he has a plan of action already formulated in his mind. Discuss why an adult should be contacted in case of fire. Present a teacher-made worksheet containing representations of a grandmother, parent, adult lady and man, and operator as well as figures such as a dog, young girl and young boy. Have the children circle the pictures of those people they should contact in case of a fire.	Instructor, Puppet Playmates, available at Fox Valley SEIMC

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
5. The child will state orally his full name and home address.	Design a bulletin board with pictures of these sources of help. A possible caption would be "Call Me!" Teacher presents "Sing a Song of Safety" sound filmstrip "Remember Your Name and Address" to stress the importance of knowing your name and address. Play the mailman game using an envelope with the students full name and address on it. Begin by saying "I have a letter for 'first name' 'surname' at 'such and such' address" (have a different mailman each time the game is played). Have the "mailman" deliver the envelope to the child who raised his hand (if correct). Teacher may place a picture, a gold star, or a small piece of candy in each envelope as a motivating surprise. Later, when the children are familiar with the game, call them by surname and address and finally by address only.

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
6. Using the telephone the student will dial "0" for operator and state the emergency and his home address.	Reinforce learning by calling on a child by his address and have him precede his class contributions by stating his full name and address (orally) before dismissing students from class for the day. Make a large telephone and working dial out of cardboard. Show the students how to place a call following the steps: <ol style="list-style-type: none">put the receiver to your ear and listen for the dial tonedial "0" bringing the finger completely around to the barrelease the dial by taking finger out completelyspeak clearly in a normal speaking voice

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
Show the child what an "O" looks like. Show him his mouth can make an "O", as can his fingers and his arms. Have each child make an "O" using his body. Explain that you dial "O" for help after you have left a burning building.
Obtain trainer from Wisconsin Telephone Company and have each child take turns dialing "O" for operator.	"Tele-trainer" Available from Wisconsin Telephone Company
Discuss what would be necessary to tell an operator after you have reached her. Talk about why the emergency and full name and address must be stated.
Role play having each child dial "O" on the trainer and report a fire to the "Operator" making sure he states the emergency and his full name and address.

Behavioral objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
1. The student will orally state how to carry pointed objects found in the classroom.	Teacher led discussion on potentially dangerous objects found in the classroom and how to handle them.
2. The student will demonstrate how to properly handle pointed objects found in a classroom situation.	Teacher demonstrates safe way to carry pointed objects found in the classroom: a. scissors should be carried points down or points protected b. pens and pencils should be carried with points down c. blackboard pointer should be held in the middle and carried point down.

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
3. The student will be able to verbally state the reasons for passing pointed objects blunt end first.	Teacher demonstrates safe way to pass pointed objects to another person-- blunt end first. Class discusses reasons for these rules: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> a. sharp ends pointed down are less likely to stab or cut someone b. person reaching for the object might be injured if the sharp end were handed to him. Teacher uses picture of classroom to stimulate further discussion on correct method of handling pointed objects. Picture shows boy passing a pencil properly.	Kindergarten/Oral English, Group A The Economy Company School-140

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
4. Given a mimeographed worksheet the student will circle all pictures demonstrating the incorrect way to handle or pass pointed objects.	Class practices carrying and passing scissors, pencils, pens, and pointers. Students work on teacher prepared worksheet. Worksheets should contain pictures demonstrating ways to carry and pass pointed objects.

Behavioral objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
1. Given an assortment of objects, the student will select pointed objects as possible causes of accident and injury.	Teacher shows class a sharpened pencil, sharp knife, pointed scissors, and a large nail driven through a board. Teacher guides class discussion on how such objects cause injuries and the kinds of accidents involved.	Assortment of objects including the items listed: sharpened pencil sharp knives pointed scissors large nail driven through a board
	Teacher writes on chalkboard, "Pointed objects may cause accidents" and asks class to list as many of them as they can, and tell how they might cause injuries.

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
2. Students will demonstrate and explain the following rules for handling pointed objects safely: <ol style="list-style-type: none">Never run while carrying a pointed objectCarry a pointed object with the point downFlatten or remove nails sticking out of boardsHand a pointed object to another person with the point toward yourself	Students copy the list of pointed objects in their notebooks under the heading shown on chalkboard. Teacher demonstrates the proper way to carry a pointed object. Teacher guides class discussion along the following lines: <ul style="list-style-type: none">Why carry pointed objects in this way?What could happen if we did not?Why is it dangerous to run with a pointed object?What causes the accident, the object or the person carrying it? Teacher shows class the board with nails driven through it, and asks why it is dangerous. Teacher demonstrates how to flatten or remove the nails.	73

Behavioral Objectives	Activities	Annotated Resource Materials	Evaluation
	Teacher may select one or more students to try to flatten or remove nails from the board, suggesting that if we can't do this alone, it is best to have an adult do it. Students tell of experiences they have had with similar objects and how accidents involving them may be prevented. Teacher demonstrates how to hand a pointed object to another person, handing it to a student and asking him to hand it back correctly. Student "teams" demonstrate correct handling of pointed objects. Teacher guides class in formulating rules for handling pointed objects safely and writes them on the chalkboard. Students copy the rules into their notebooks.
